

Clinical Lactation Call for Manuscripts

Editor-in-Chief:

Shera Thomas-Jackson, PhD, IBCLC
Texas Tech University
clinicallactation@uslca.org

Clinical Lactation is seeking manuscripts for its peer-reviewed quarterly journal. Clinical Lactation is the official journal of the United States Lactation Consultant Association and aims to inform practice for lactation care providers within the United States. Clinical Lactation solicits concise and straightforward papers that offer unique and innovative information and ideas that may be valuable in a wide variety of practice settings.

Clinicians, authors, and researchers are encouraged to submit papers in a variety of formats including case studies, research reports, care plan templates/algorithms, or similar. Topics covered may include, but are not limited to; clinical lactation care or management, nutrition science, counseling, professional practice, mentorship, or ethics.

Clinical Lactation readers represent a wide diversity of practice setting, experience, focus, and background.

High priority will be given to papers that incorporate the advancement of diversity, equity, and inclusion within the lactation field.

Topic suggestions may include:

- Current and/or best practices
- Initiation and duration
- Education and counseling
- Non-binary breastfeeding
- Breastfeeding laws and policies
- Parental experiences
- Support
- Health outcomes
- Galactagogues
- Pharmaceutical considerations
- Food Insecurity
- Lactation professional practice
- Challenges and experiences to becoming a lactation service personnel
- Ethics
- Diversity, equity, and inclusion
- Clinical problem solving

No submission fee is required. No publication fee is required for accepted papers. Please follow the submission guidelines to prepare the manuscripts and submit the manuscript online using ScholarOne (<https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/clinlac>). The submission guidelines and other journal information can be found at: <https://connect.springerpub.com/content/sgrcl>

For more information about the journal, please contact the Editor-in-Chief, Shera Thomas-Jackson, at clinicallactation@uslca.org.